

CIEH Level 3 Award in Supervising Food Safety in Catering (Refresher)

Syllabus

A Food safety legislation

Candidates should understand the role of the supervisor in ensuring compliance with food safety legislation and be able to:

- i Summarise the importance of food safety management procedures.
- ii Explain the responsibilities of employers and employees in respect of food safety legislation and procedures for compliance.
- iii Outline how the legislation is enforced.

B Good food safety practice

Candidates should understand the application and monitoring of good food safety practice and be able to:

- i Explain the importance of, and methods for, temperature control.
- ii Explain procedures to control contamination and cross-contamination.
- iii Justify the importance of high standards of personal hygiene.
- iv Explain procedures for cleaning, disinfection and waste disposal.
- v Outline requirements relating to the design of food premises and equipment.
- vi Describe the importance of, and methods for, pest control.

C Food safety management procedures

Candidates should understand how to implement food safety management procedures and be able to:

- i Describe the importance to food safety of microbial, chemical, physical and allergenic hazards.
- ii Describe methods and procedures for controlling food safety to include critical control points, critical limits and corrective actions.
- iii Explain the requirements for monitoring and recording food safety procedures.
- iv Describe methods for, and the importance of, evaluating food safety controls and procedures.

D Training and communication

Candidates should understand the role of the supervisor in staff training and be able to:

- i Explain the requirements for induction and on-going training of staff.
- ii Explain the importance of effective communication of food safety procedures.

Chartered
Institute of Environmental Health

Customer Services

Chartered Institute of Environmental Health
Chadwick Court, 15 Hatfields, London SE1 8DJ

Telephone 020 7827 5800 (Option 1)

Email customerservices@cieh.org Web www.cieh.org/training